Building Progress Good Here in 1935

Point Loma, Ocean Beach and Mission Beach have made good progress and development during the year 1935 and 1936 no doubt will be a banner year for building as every residence is now occupied and the demand very good for more housing accommodations.

It is believed that fully $300,000 has been spent for new homes, apartments and store buildings on Point Loma during 1935. Builders operating here are optimistic as to demands for 1936. At the beginning of 1935 there were a good many vacant lots that were offered at a sacrifice but by the middle of the year these became scarce and now it is thought that property is bringing nearer its true value.

Following is a list of new improvement contracted for during 1935 which though not complete will give a very fair idea as to the building progress of the past year.

He will show that the present is one of crisis, of serious moment in the world's destiny, when great cycles are ending and new ones beginning, an age of conflict between old and new, the old running downward to its close and the new cycles rising. He will emphasize the fact that is is not these cycles that make civilization, but we ourselves who make it, the cycles giving us the opportunity to mold conditions ameliorating or affecting for ill conditions throughout the world.

de Zirkoff will speak of the individual progress that can be made in the new cycle, thus relating it intimately to our human possibilities of achievement today. Questions from the audience are invited.

2,175 MORE FARMS & RANCHES IN SAN DIEGO COUNTY

On January 1, 1935 there were 2,175 more farms and ranches in San Diego County, California, than on April 1, 1930, according to preliminary figures for the 1935 Federal Farm Census released by Director William L. Austin, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce.

That these new farms and ranches are small is indicated by a decrease of 62.6 acres in the average size between 1930 and 1935. Many of these new operations probably represent subsistence and part-time farms.

VETERAN POSTS THANK MERCHANTS

Forty baskets of food were distributed to needy families of this community on Christmas Eve by members of American Legion post 433 and Veteran of Foreign War post 2415. Over four hundred and fifty articles of canned food were received from Xmas boxes placed in the stores of the district, amounting in value to approximately $75. Of this quantity of goods, three hundred and seventy five articles were received as the proceeds of the matinee show presented by Mr. Gruber's Strand theatre. Fifty dollars worth of fresh meat, vegetables, coffee, and sugar were purchased from local stores and were added to the boxes, making a total of $125 in foodstuffs distributed.

In behalf of the members of the two veteran organizations we wish to thank all individuals and the merchants who so generously supported us in making a success of this undertaking. Particularly do we wish to thank Mr. Gruber who contributed at least 50 percent of the groceries and to the principal and teachers of the local school who made it possible for the children to attend the show.

May you all enjoy a happy and prosperous New Year in exchange for your kindly deeds.

Fred H. Norris, Comdr. post 2415 V.F.W. Logan E. Ruggles, Comdr., post 433, American Legion.

Franco-British Peace Plan Killed; Hoare Resigns

IF IT really was intended to bring about peace between Italy and Ethiopia, the plan proposed by British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and Premier Laval of France turned out a dismal failure. The storm of opposition to the scheme which would give Mussolini two-thirds of the African country as a reward for stopping an attack that was denounced by the League of Nations, brought the British and French governments to the point of collapse. To save the Baldwin cabinet, Hoare resigned on the eve of a parliamentary battle in the house of commons, and Baldwin frankly told parliament that the peace plan was an error. Despite fierce attacks by the Laborites and Liberals, the prime minister was given a vote of confidence. Several days later he announced the appointment of Capt. Anthony Eden as foreign secretary.

Sir Samuel Hoare

In Paris Edouard Herriot, member of the cabinet without portfolio, resigned as president of the powerful Radical Socialist party whose support is needed by Laval to maintain his majority in the parliament. Herriot's action, in the opinion of some observers, presaged Laval's early downfall.

Hoare's position became untenable when he learned that the peace plan was about to be buried at Geneva. Capt. Anthony Eden, probably never enthusiastic for it, practically repudiated the scheme in a public meeting of the league council. Laval also spoke, more reservedly, declaring that even if the plan were rejected, the council must continue to seek conciliation. After the session, however, he admitted to French newspaper men that the plan, for the time being at least, is dead.

The council received from Addis Ababa a note in which Emperor Haile Selassie bluntly accused Great Britain and France of having violated the league covenant by seeking "to impose upon Ethiopia a predominant control by Italy with the certain aim of entrusting to Italy the administration of the capital and a large part of the territory. The League of Nations in consenting to lend itself to such dissimulation would violate article X of the covenant."

In view of all the opposition and of Mussolini's hint that he would reject the proposals, the league council killed the plan entirely, softening its action by formally thanking Great Britain and France for their "preliminary efforts" toward peace. A permanent committee of 13 councilors—all but the Italian member—was named to study the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

How close Europe is coming to a general war is apparent with the revelation that Britain is lining up the coutries of the Mediterranean region for support in case she is attacked by Italy. Most of them are believed to have given this pledge. But Bulgaria, a close friend of Italy, would be expected in that case to attack either Greece or Turkey, both allies of Britain, and Rumania has promised the British that she will attack the Bulgarians in that case. This would arouse Hungary to the defense of Bulgaria; Czechoslovakia would be drawn in against Hungary, and Poland probably would take the field against the Czechs. Germany is allied to Poland, and Russia to Czechoslovakia. Such is the realistic view of the situation held by competent observers in European capitals.

Senator Schall Dies of Auto Accident Injuries

SENATOR THOMAS D. SCHALL of Minnesota, who was struck by an automobile as he was being conducted across the highway near his residence in Maryland, succumbed to his injuries. The blind statesman had been one of the bitterest opponents of the New Deal and President Roosevelt. He had started his campaign for re-election and Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota had announced he also would seek the nomination for Schall's seat. The governor said after the senator's death that he would soon appoint his successor; that he had no intention of resigning in order to be himself named to fill Schall's place.

Senator Schall

Mr. Schall, who was born in 1878 in Michigan, lost his sight in an accident after he had been practicing law in Minnesota four years. He continued his work, and served six terms in the house of representatives before he was elected to the senate in 1924.

Supreme Court May Be Divided on TVA

WHEN the Supreme court passes on the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley act, its opinion will not be unanimous, is the prediction of those who were present during the oral arguments. The case was taken up to the highest tribunal by fourteen preferred stockholders of the Alabama Power company.

During arguments by Forney Johnson, Birmingham, Ala., attorney for the stockholders, and by John Lord O'Brian, New York attorney, for TVA, justices shot many questions at the lawyers.

Justice McReynolds, known as a "conservative," appeared to challenge the TVA lawyer to defend the right of the government to sell surplus power produced by Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals.

On the other hand, Justices Brandeis and Stone, who are known as "liberals," inquired into the right of minority stockholders of the Alabama Power company to bring the suit which led to the Supreme court test. The stockholders sought to enjoin performance of a contract under which the company was to sell lines to TVA for transmission of power.

Federal Judge Holds Wagner Labor Law Invalid

FEDERAL Judge Merrill E. Otis at Kansas City has held unconstitutional the Wagner labor dispute act which gives employees the right to organize and bargain collectively. The judge granted the Majestic Flour mills of Aurora, Mo., a temporary injunction against a National Labor board complaint which cited it for alleged refusal to bargain concerning a wage and hour agreement with a union of its employees.

Declaring congress had exceeded its constitutional right "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states . . ." the judge said, "the conclusion is that the whole act is unconstitutional."

Senator Borah's Hat Is Almost in the Ring

IF WISCONSIN Republicans wish to make Senator Borah their candidate for the Presidential nomination, it is all right with the veteran from Idaho.

Senator Borah

State Senator P. E. Nelson of Maple, Wis., and former State Senator Bernhard Gettelman of Milwaukee called on Mr. Borah in Washington and asked permission to circulate nominating petitions for him in their state. This was granted.

Mr. Borah told reporters that Nelson and Gettelman had suggested a campaign for "a delegation representing the liberal forces in the party out there, and in my name." He had agreed, he said, to "go along with them."

Later Mr. Borah issued this statement:

"My primary objective is a convention of liberal delegates which will write a liberal platform and name a liberal candidate. To that end I shall devote my efforts. If in any state or district the liberal forces think that it will help the liberal cause to pledge delegates to me, I shall co-operate fully with that plan. If, however, it is thought better to pledge the delegates to some other liberal, I shall co-operate just as fully. In other words, inflexible as to the objective, flexible as to the tactics.

"As I see the political situation in this country, a man would be seeking political immolation to take a nomination upon any other than a liberal platform. So the first thing to do is to get a convention committed to liberal principles. So far as my efforts count, I am not going to permit personal matters, either my own or those of others, to interfere with the main purpose."

Kidnaping Threats Drive Lindberghs to England

REPEATED threats of kidnaping and even murder for their little son have driven Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh from the United States. They have sailed with their boy, Jon, for England, and plan to establish a residence there, though they will not give up their American citizenship. Where they will live has not been revealed to even their closest friends. It is believed the colonel will not sever his relations with the two air transport companies for which he is a technical adviser but that his active work for them will cease.

Government Ownership of Railways Is Urged

GOVERNMENT ownership of America's railroads is the objective in a campaign which has been started by the Railway Labor Executives' association. Describing the carriers as "chips in a financial poker game," the executives, in a circular to members of congress, ask for government ownership as "the only way out of the morass in which the roads have been placed by the bankers."

Senator Wheeler of Montana introduced a resolution for government ownership in the last session but did not ask for immediate consideration of the measure.

War Department Lobbying Brings Indictments

TWO grand juries, a house committee and an army court martial have been investigating lobbying at the War department for two years. The climax came with the indictment in Washington of a dismissed army officer, a former member of congress, and two alleged lobbyists on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government.

Those named were former Brig. Gen. Alexander E. Williams, one time acting quartermaster general of the army, who was convicted by a military court last spring of accepting an improper loan and ordered dismissed from the service; Thomas Jefferson Ryan, lawyer and former representative from New York, and the well known Silverman brothers, Joseph, Jr., and Nathan, surplus army goods dealers.

The four men were charged with conspiring to prevent the house military affairs committee from questioning Frank E. Speicher, "mystery witness" of the long inquiry by hiding him out in New York city while federal agents were hunting him throughout the nation.

Gomez, Long Dictator of Venezuela, Is Dead

DICTATOR of Venezuela for twenty-seven years, during most of the time president of the country, Gen. Juan Vicente Gomez died in Caracas of an old malady at the age of seventy-eight years. The cabinet named Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras, minister of war, as provisional president to hold office until his successor is elected by congress. While guns boomed in salute Gomez was buried on the anniversary of his assumption of power in 1909. On that day he executed a coup d'etat by which he seized the government while President Cipriano Castro was in Europe seeking health. During his regime there were many incipient revolts but he crushed them all with an iron hand; and even when the presidential chair was occupied by others his control of the government was absolute.

Gen. Gomez

Among Gomez's greatest contributions to Venezuela were the establishment of friendly relations with foreign nations and peace within the country, the building of a fine system of automobile highways, and development of natural resources.

He made the most of the great petroleum deposits at Lake Maracaibo, granting many concessions to foreign oil companies, but placing an export tax on oil. The industry in Venezuela grew until it now holds third rank in the world.

Gomez succeeded in paying off the entire debt of his country, amounting to nearly $40,000,000, and at the same time accumulated a great fortune for himself.

Army Air Corps Orders New Bombing Planes

CONTRACTS have been awarded for 103 new bombing planes for the army air corps. The Douglas Aircraft company, Inc., of Santa Monica, Calif., was given an order for 90 all-metal, low wing, twin-engined monoplanes, costing a total of $6,498,000.

Thirteen giant four-motored "sky cruisers" were bought from the Boeing company of Seattle, Wash. The price for the Boeing craft was not given in the announcement by Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war.

North China Autonomous Council Installed

DESPITE the riotous opposition of students and other youth of Peiping the Hopei-Chahar political council, supported by Japan, took over the affairs of the autonomous North China provinces, with Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan as its chairman. That gentleman in his first official announcement declared that opposition demonstrations were being promoted by Communists, against whom he would take drastic action.

General Sung said he would do his best to promote good relations with neighboring countries "which treat us with equality and reciprocity" (Japan and Manchukuo).

Hopkins Sees That WPA Workers Get Paid

WORKS Progress Administrator Harry Hopkins issued an order that made happy about 3,500,000 workers under his unit.

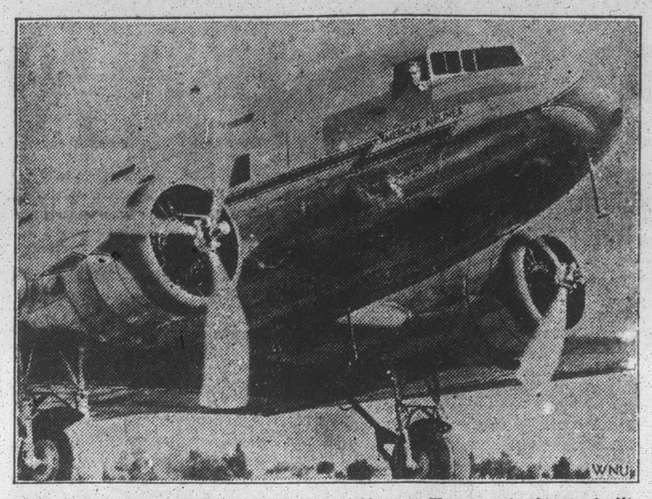

"I desire that every regular WPA pay check earned be in the hands of the worker by December 24," Hopkins said, in telegraphed instructions to state program directors. "The law does not permit advance payments, but no effort should be spared to deliver checks due by Christmas eve.

"Overtime work by administrative employees handling pay rolls should be ordered where necessary and courier service should be arranged if necessary to overcome transportation delays caused by congestion in the mails."

President Roosevelt entered on a new round of conferences on the relief program to be provided for in the budget for the fiscal year beginning next July 1. New Deal officials associated with relief were summoned to the White House to offer suggestions for keeping the relief program down so that the administration can point to budget balancing efforts in the 1936 campaign.

Plans for organizing the Civilian Conservation corps on a smaller but permanent basis were discussed with Robert Fechner, CCC director, and a group of cabinet officers. Under the program the CCC enrollment would be cut from 460,000 to 300,000 men by next July 1.

'BIGGEST PLANE' GIVEN TEST

Here is the first of the new Douglas Sleeper Transport planes, built at Santa Monica, ready for a test flight. In luxury and completeness the new transport planes far surpass any plane in present operation in the United States. Gross weight is 24,000 pounds; wing span 95 feet, and overall height 16 feet, 4 inches. Eight roomy sections, four on each side of a broad aisle comprise the interior of the passenger cabin. Berths are several inches longer than standard railroad berths.

Loses Out

A civil service examination eliminated Russell Bevans (shown above) as a candidate for the Registrar of Motor Vehicles, a $5,000 a year job to which he was appointed by the late Governor Rolph. Bevans failed to place among the first three candidates, one of which will be selected for the post by Ray Ingels, director of motor vehicles.

Sacramento.—Fatalities on California's highways in November reached the highest monthly figure in the history of the State, according to E. Raymond Cato, chief of the California highway patrol. Provisional figures are 295 deaths, and the final check may run the total to 300.

Their Majesties

Jack and Helen Patterson, residents of Yosemite, have been "elected" king and queen of the winter sports season now in full swing in the Valley. At the Badger Pass Ski Slopes an innovation is the "up ski" which pulls the skiiers back to the summit for another try.

Oppose Tax-Free Colony

Sacramento.—The Board of Equalization has passed a resolution asking Senator Hiram Johnson and Representative Sam L. Collins to oppose bills before Congress seeking to establish a tax-free principality on an Indian reservation near Palm Springs, fashionable desert resort.

London Tower Fortress, Palace, Prison in Turn

The tower, situated on the banks of the Thames, is perhaps London's most interesting historical monument. Surrounded by a moat, it dates back to the Roman period, and in turn has served the purposes of a fortress, a royal palace, and a state prison. It is now a show place, museum, and military barracks.

The tower has been associated with the darkest scenes of English history. Its oldest part, the White tower, was built by William the Conqueror, outside what then were the walls of the city, to overawe the inhabitants within them. The walls of this Norman work are from 11 to 15 feet thick. In the Wakefield tower, built by Henry III in 1260, lie the crown jewels. The memorial retains an atmosphere of grandeur and grimness unsurpassed in England. Anne Boleyn, mother of Queen Elizabeth, spent her last night there before being beheaded. The spot where she and many other personages were put to death may be seen by all tourists.

France Is Again Closing Her "Iron Gates"

INDICATIVE of the state of unrest in Europe is the fact that France has re-established Longwy, a border town that made history in the World war, as a garrison town. The troops are seen marching through the city gate to take up the watch on the eastern frontier.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HOW LIGHTFOOT GOT RID OF THE HOUNDS

POOR LIGHTFOOT! It seemed to him that there were no such things as justice and fair play. It was bad enough to have hunters searching the Green Forest for him, watching at the places where he was accustomed to drink, searching every hiding place. Had it been just one hunter at a time against whom he had to match his wits it would not have been so bad, but there were many hunters with terrible guns looking for him, and in dodging one he was likely at any time to meet another. This in itself seemed terribly unfair and unjust. But now, added to this was the greater unfairness of being trailed by hounds.

On the Bank the Hounds Stopped and Bayed Their Disappointment.

Do you wonder that Lightfoot thought of men as utterly heartless? You see, he could not know that those hounds had not been put on his trail, but had left home to hunt for their own pleasure. He could not know that it was against the law to hunt deer with dogs. But though none of those hunters looking for him was guilty of having put the hounds on his trail, each one of them was willing and eager to take advantage of the fact that the hounds were on his trail. Already he had been shot at once, and he knew that he would be shot at again if he should be driven where a hunter was hidden.

The ground was damp, and scent always lies best on damp ground. This made it easy for the hounds to follow him with their wonderful noses. Lightfoot tried every trick he could think of to make those hounds lose the scent.

"If only I could make them lose it long enough for me to get a little rest, it would help," panted Lightfoot as he paused for just an instant to listen to the baying of the hounds.

But he couldn't. They allowed him no rest. He was becoming very, very tired. He could no longer bound lightly over fallen logs or brush as he had done at first. His lungs ached as he panted for breath. He realized that even though she should escape the hunters, it would be to meet an even more terrible death unless he could get rid of those hounds. There would come a time when he would have to stop. Then those hounds would catch up with him and tear him to pieces.

It was then that he remembered the Big River. He turned toward it. It was his only chance, and he knew it. Straight through the Green Forest, out across the Green Meadows to the bank of the Big River Lightfoot ran. For just a second he paused to look behind. The hounds were almost at his heels. Lightfoot hesitated no longer, but plunged into the Big River and began to swim. On the bank the hounds stopped and bayed their disappointment, for they did not dare follow Lightfoot out into the Big River.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

Crouton Soup.

¾ cup finely-cut croutons
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons malted milk
3 cups milk
¼ cup cream
Seasoning

Fry croutons in butter until light brown, add milk and heat. Mix malted milk to a paste with cold water and add. Season to taste and when ready to serve add cream and sprinkle with paprika.

Codfish Balls.

4 or 5 medium-sized potatoes
1 cup picked salt cod or
½ cup prepared salt cod
1 tablespoon butter
Pepper
1 egg or 2 egg yolks

Pare and slice potatoes and cook with picked cod in boiling water until potatoes are tender. Drain, mash and beat until smooth. Add butter, pepper and egg. Drop by tablespoons into very hot fat, 395 degrees F., and cook until light brown. Drain on soft paper. If mixture is too soft to hold together a tablespoon of flour may be added. The finished cakes, however, should be irregular in shape. If croquettes of regular shape are desired, add the flour, shape and dip in flour before frying. Garnish with bacon fried in deep fat and with sliced lemon.

Scalloped Oysters.

1 pint oysters
¼ cup oyster liquor
2 tablespoons milk
1 cup dried bread crumbs
1 cup rolled cracker crumbs
½ cup melted buter
Salt
Pepper

Mix cracker and bread crumbs with the milk. Put a thin layer in the bottom of a baking dish, cover with oysters, sprinkle with salt and pepper and add half the milk and oyster liquor. Repeat and cover top with remaining crumbs. Bake thirty minuets in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit).

Worries John Bull

Important in the critical anti-British situation in Egypt is Nahas Pasha who is leader of the WAFD or Nationalist party. Members of this party are responsible for the grave outbreaks against British influence in Cairo. In a recent speech Nahas denied that he or his party had the slightest pro-Italian sentiment. "We want to be Great Britain's ally, not its vassal," he said.

TODAY DECIDE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE man you meet upon the street
Today was yesterday a child,
Who yesterday was plastic clay,
Unfashioned yet and undefiled.
Then came the old the mind to mould,
The heart to shape for good or ill;
For we may take the child and make
Tomorrow's man the thing we will.

The woman who is known to you
Today was yesterday a maid
To take, refuse, as we may choose,
Then genuine, the masquerade.
Then came to us the moment thus,
To us who surely understood
Life's calm and storm, our task to form
Tomorrow's woman, ill or good.

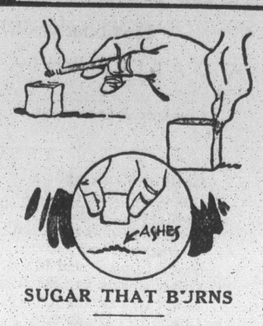

The child you find with open mind
Today in school, at home, or where,
Is ours to plan—the woman, man,
Tomorrow is today's affair.
And we who teach, or pray, or preach,
The teacher, parent, all who guide,
Shall shape the will for good or ill—
Tomorrow's life today decide.

TRY THIS TRICK

By PONJAY HARRAH

Copyright by Public Ledger, Inc.

SUGAR THAT BURNS

WILL sugar burn? The easiest way to answer the question is to try it. At the magician's suggestion, people experiment with matches and lumps of sugar. They find that sugar will blacken and melt, but apparently will not burn.

That is, not until the magician tries it. The moment that he applies a match to the lump of sugar, a bluish flame results. The sugar burns steadily, the tiny flame eating away a corner of the lump.

People will puzzle deeply over this, without learning the secret of the trick. You can mystify your friends time and again with this simple experiment. But never try the trick except when cigarette or cigar ashes are handy.

For you must first dip the corner of the lump into the ashes. Do this secretly. Then apply the match. The presence of the ashes will enable the flame to take hold. Once started, the combustion continues.

To Match the Car

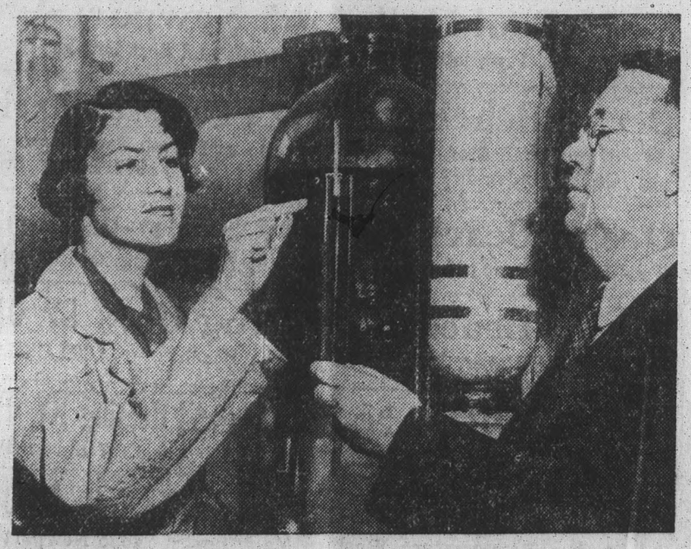

This chic new sports hat for winter is made of automobile upholstery fabric. Influenced by the attractive interiors of the 1936 models, the designer selected taupe mohair velvet with the new "breathing back" that makes it soft and easy to tailor, so milady now may have a hat to match her car if she chooses.

"It's sad but true," says typing Tillie, "but if we don't come back from that two weeks vacation feeling half dead we figure we didn't have a good time."

Making Sugar From Dahlia Bulbs

PROLIFIC flower gardens of the South may soon provide a new industry, with the extraction of sugar, twice as sweet as cane or beet sugar, from dahlia bulbs. It is being produced experimentally by Dr. LeRoy S. Weatherby, chemistry professor in the University of Southern California, who believes it may serve as another aid in the war against diabetes, as the new sugar is more easily oxidizable. The production is similar to that of beet sugar production, the dahlia bulbs being sliced, crushed, converted into starch, then into syrup, from which the fine sugar is precipitated. The photograph shows Miss Florence Shelly, assistant, and Dr. Weatherby inspecting syrup in a retort.

GERMS JUMP EIGHT FEET IN SNEEZE, AUTHORITIES FIND

Because health officials have long contended that germs causing the common cold, from which several millions of the population suffer annually, are spread chiefly by coughs and sneezes, the American Institute of Sanitation recently conducted a series of experiments to determine just how far a germ can travel in a sneeze.

Test plates were prepared with a suitable medium to receive bacteria and were held at different distances from persons afflicted with cold to catch germs projected into the air by sneezes and explosive coughs. After being exposed to the sneezes the test plates were examined after the colonies of bacteria that had developed from the seed were large enough to be counted. Precautions were taken to prevent contamination of the plates from outside sources. It was found from the experiments that a deep sneeze can project germs as far as eight feet. Conversation carried on in ordinary tones may result in a germ screen being sent out to a distance of two or three feet.

"In view of the ease by which countless germs may be rained on surrounding objects by a sneeze or cough, the best way to prevent colds is to keep from contact with sufferers, both directly and indirectly," comments the institute. "Reading a book or using a pencil after sneezers should be avoided.

"Rigid rules of sanitation should prevail in buildings used by a number of persons. First, all the sunshine possible should be admitted. Drawn shades are favorable to prolonging the life of disease bacteria outside the body. In schools and offices a modern, efficient disinfectant should be added to the mop water. Dry sweeping and dusting should be avoided. Brooms and dusters extend the range of the original sneezes. Instead of dusting the desks should be wiped off with a cloth wrung out frequently from water containing adequate disinfectant.

"The use of antiseptic mouth washes by cold sufferers may be regarded as both a personal and a public health measure. Through such reduction of the number of bacteria in the mouth, there are less bacterial buckshot in a sneeze."

Light Breakfast Idea Out, Home Economist Declares

The light breakfast is nutritionally unsound, according to Inez S. Wilson home economist. Many persons have found that a breakfast of the toast and coffee variety does not furnish sufficient nourishment to last the morning through.

After all, breakfast is really what the name implies, a break of the fast, and after several hours without food, that meal of all meals should be substantial. The first requirement of a substantial meal is that it gives a feeling of satisfaction and well-being, and then it must be so tempting that it is worth getting up a minute or two earlier in order to enjoy it.

Nineteen Hundred Thirty-six

Happy New Year! We not only wish it individually, but why not wish the world a Happy New Year? This broken vessel of tragedy, war and financial burdens. It might be a happy year for millions more who are in no position to be happy today, were the World in high places, to turn over a new leaf, and do less selfish-striving. Peace for war; plenty for poverty; state craftsmanship instead of strife. Surely it might hasten the millenium.

What if the world were to take the profit out of war; find employment for millions; take politics out of legislation; substitute economy for waste and exile johnbarleycorn. What an inventory! Then there would be a balanced budget, and high taxes would be forgotten.

Notwithstanding, the year just closed has been one of hardship and loss to a great number. There are promises of better times, and, we all hope the worst of the depression is gone. At any rate the best way to face the battle of life for 1936, is to stand firm and look for victory. What we may say and think might have much to do toward helping overcome conditions. Of all things finally, resolve to try and meet your responsibilities as they come. Balance your budget by living within your means, be economical and wise by making the dollar earned, as elastic as its buying power will allow; then there is hope you should expect a happy and prosperous year.

Marriage and Divorce

The President recently signed a more liberal divorce law. Does this mean that the nation is seeking loftier standards in American life; or is it a social gesture for more peaceful living?

It seems that the world was never more at a loss to account for so many failures in life—the broken marriage bond; the shattered home, or the wreckage of honorable, successful living. "Count that home happy when the husband wipes the dinner dishes," is a saying never more needed than today.

Human nature in its tragedy, its comedy and pathos is making up a great volume in the pages of history. Jealousy and envy take a large toll of human life. Every minute of the day somebody somewhere is being killed through jealousy, suicide or otherwise.

Married life is not to be fooled with; all the domestic points should be carefully weighed before the preacher ties the knot. A columnist remarks that when a man's wife gets so she can read him like a book it is time to turn over a new leaf. The recognized social color scheme is and always has been: white means purity; green means jealousy and red means angry passion.

When the Legislature meets again to row over taxes, there is a suspicion that few unscrupulous minds will be active in its effort to reduce school appropriations. Lately several tax-reduction groups in California have included school-fund slashing in their programs, and furthermore instead of decreasing school costs, it has raised them by forcing schools to organize costly "publicity departments" to combat it. It may be alright to slash costs of government, salaries and many other expenses, quite unneccessary, but if there is one function of government that deserves to be aided and supported in every way possible, that function is the maintenance of adequate educational facilities. Schools must be protected and permitted to progress to the highest attainable levels of scope and proficiency. They must, that is, if civilization is to move upard and onward. We all know this of course, or should at least.

The advent of 1936 brings us in contact with another "leap year." It is not only leap year, but is is also Presidential election year; all taken together means political activity and calendar reckoning. As the solar year is a little less than 365¼ days, Caesar, in reforming the calendar, added a day to February in every fourth year to compensate for the additional 24 hours. The name, however comes from the fact that whereas a given date in normal years falls on the week-day following that in which it occurs the preceeding year, it "leaps" over a day in leap year and falls two week-days afterward. Leap year has its authority, designated to the fair sex, who may usurp the social prerogative over their mate. It is looked upon with a good deal of sport vested to her in "popping the question."

Billy Sunday's life was a good stewardship rendered, and if any man has chance for reward, it is this religious zealot, who recently passed on. He is reported to have given away $124,000 for charity during the World war. Besides this, along with his many gifts to humanity, he gave to Pacific Garden Mission, where he became converted in 1886, over $68,000. Money was not his god for he died leaving a small estate of only $50,000. He was in evangelistic work for nearly fifty years, and died the most beloved of all evangelists, although he mixed comedy, tragedy and pathos with every sermon, and bordered on the clown, in the pulpit.

Tax time again; how time flies! We expected it, however, but no one ever dreams of taxes being lower. Impossible. In January the new vehicle license tax in its doubled form, will be in order. It all reminds one of the advice of the county officials, who need the money badly. "Pay your taxes with a smile," they said. In reply the taxpayer wonders, and finally one writes in, "I should love to pay my taxes with a smile, if I could; but confound it all, the collector insists on the cash!"

Started Protection of Employees 4 Years Ago

California's new Unemployment Reserves Commission today was offered the full cooperation of Safeway Stores, Inc., in administering the State's Unemployment Reserve Act, and the Federal Social Security Act, both of which became effective on January 1.

Provisions of both laws have been closely studied by officials of Safeway Stores who are now prepared to carry them out in the future interests of their employees thruout California.

Safeway's officials met with members of the Commission, recently appointed to administer the act in California and advised them of their desire to assist in every possible way in preparing for the proper execution of the law in this state.

"It is our desire to see that every feature of the new measures is properly carried out by our company in the interest of our employees," L. A. Warren, president of Safeway Stores Inc., informed the Commission.

"Establishment of adequate social and economic safeguards for the welfare of employees and their dependents has always been of great concern to our company," Warren said.

"Four years ago we established a system ourselves whereby our employees and their families would be protected against financial losses caused by sickness, accidents, or death through a program of free insurance, administered by a newly established Safeway Employes association.

POULTRY HELPS.

By E. E. Steele.

Aspergillosis is a fungous disease of the lungs and air sacs. It is one of the causes of brooder pneumonia in baby chicks.

The cause is the common green mold, aspergillus fumigatus, which grows on vegetables and other kinds of matter. Moldy hay, straw, or chaff to scratch in or moldy feed will cause the disease; the birds inhale the spores of the fungus which attack the air tubes and the lungs. The first symtom is a mild catarrh, with accelerated breathing.

The swellings soon obstruct the air passage and there is a rattling sound heard during expiration chiefly. The affected birds mope, seperate themselves from the remainder of the flock, become weak and remain in a sitting posture, they gasp for breath, have fever, diarrhea, drooping wings, a tendency to sleep and finally suffocate.

There is no known cure.

PROGRESS---

The years bring new things. The ox-cart gives way to swiftly speeding motors — electric lights shed their brilliance where once candles dimly glowed—it's a world of change.

Our methods have changed too—we have tried to give this community the very best—in other words we've tried to keep pace with the times.

But one thing has not changed—and that's the spirit behind this organization. There is still the same friendship, the same standards of high ideals and the same high quality of service that was in the beginning. And in the same unchanging spirit we offer our New Year Greetings and our wishes for happiness for everyone thruout 1936.

CHAPTER I

I Attend a Funeral.

If my cousin, Geoffrey Bohun, had had to work for his living, he would, as a painter of portraits, have made his mark, but work within doors he would not, and since he cared nothing at all for riches or fame, he painted old buildings and landscapes and lazy streams, and though I think that he painted these very well, the public would not have them, but clamored for portraits instead.

Whether Geoffrey was right or wrong, I cannot pretend to say, but I must confess that I was glad of his choice, for since my parents' death I had lived with him, and the work he preferred made us free of the countryside. Indeed, of the four years preceding the matters which I am to tell we had not spent six months at his London house, but had traveled winter and summer, at home and abroad. We visited many places and saw all manner of beauties that few men see, for often enough my cousin would paint at dawn, when the dew lay thick upon the meadows and the mountains stood up like a rood-screen against the sky.

Of such was my education, after I left my school, and though I might have done better to go to Oxford instead, I learned to speak German and French with a pretty good grace and to share with the peasants of Europe their several hopes and fears.

I was in as fine a condition as a man of two-and-twenty may be, and my only care was the knowledge that very soon now the agreeable life I was leading must come to an end. This by my cousin's decree, for Geoffrey was trustee of my fortune, and though he was only some twelve years older than I, I had to a great extent to do as he said. And at twenty-three, he declared, I must take to work: "and from then," said he, "till you're thirty your allowance will be exactly as much as you earn. Earn five pounds a week, and I'll give you another five. You've got to make good."

I was brooding on this one morning—for my birthday was the first of October, and June was very near out—when I heard the sound of voices a little way off.

This was unusual enough, for, save for the birds and beasts, an Austrian forest at dawn is a lonely place: but what was stranger still was that the voices were English, and coarse at that.

Geoffrey was painting a vista two furlongs away, and Barley, his man, was half a mile off with the Rolls. It was, therefore, plain that no one was talking with them, and I made my way quietly forward to see and hear what I could.

Almost at once I saw bushes which seemed to me to be screening the edge of some bluff. I could hear the sound of labor and the sob of a man as he wielded some heavy tool.

Then a spout of oaths startled the silence, and two men were cursing each other, the one alleging that the other would be his death, and the other insisting that the one had got in his way.

A third man spoke.

"Suppose you go on now."

"But he'll do me in in a minute, layin' about with that pick."

"The world will be the cleaner," said the other, and stifled a yawn. "Till then, get on with your work. I say, get on."

His voice was deadly.

More curious than ever, I lay down on the ground and, wriggling cautiously forward into the bushes which screened the men from my view.

I shall never forget the scene.

Directly below me, in the midst of a sparkling dell, were five grown men. Two, with pickaxe and shovel, were digging a hasty grave: the sods had been piled to one side, but a third man was taking the earth and casting it into a brook. A fourth man was leaning against the trunk of a tree smoking a cigarette. And the fifth lay dead beside him.

This spectacle shocked me so much that a moment or two went by before I had collected my wits: then I knew that the man had been murdered, for his gay, green, belted smock was heavily stained with blood.

As the porter came back from the brook—

"That's enough earth away, Dewdrop," said the man who had spoken last. "Take another stroll in the country and see there's nobody up."

The man who was shovelling stopped and straightened his back.

"Lemme do that, Pharaoh. I'm sick of this — spade."

The man addressed as Pharaoh wrinkled his brow.

"I've never liked you," he said. "And when you question my orders, I like you less. There's food for thought there, Rush. . . ."

An instant later Dewdrop was out of sight.

That I was in some danger was perfectly clear. I was, however, determined not to withdraw, for the corpse cried out for vengeance, and if once I lost touch with the rogues, my chance of bringing them down might be gone for good.

I decided to try and "pick up" Dewdrop without delay, for, once I knew where he was, my woodcraft would probably beat him.

Without more ado I therefore abandoned my covert and almost at once I heard the fellow stumble over the root of some tree and two minutes later I was afoot behind him.

I had hoped that after a casual survey the man would return to the dell, for then I could reach my cousin and tell him my news. While he was fetching Barley, I could then go back to my covert to keep an eye on the rogues. But Dewdrop stayed on.

He was passing the covert in which I had lain, when he stopped and peered at the bushes and then glanced round.

Satisfied that no one was looking, he went on his hands and knees, to pluck from the heart of the bushes a paper some four inches long.

I shall never forget that moment—I think that my heart stood still: for, as my hand flew to my pocket, I knew that paper was . . . a shoemaker's bill, which had followed me out from London . . . complete with its envelope bearing my name and address—the address of the inn at which Geoffrey and I were lodging some five miles off.

I saw Dewdrop finger the letter and find it dry. Then he looked from his find to the spot at which it had lain. Then he lay down and drew himself forward, parting the bushes before him exactly as I had done. Plainly, the man was no fool. He wished to be sure how much John Spencer had seen — John Spencer, of The Three Kings, Lass.

The next moment he was up and was whipping back to the dell.

The murder was out.

* * * * * * *

As we hurried back to the Rolls, I told my cousin my tale, and though he made no comment, I saw that he was perturbed.

Arrived at the car, I saw him take out a pistol and slip it into his coat.

Ten minutes later we slid into the yard of the inn at Lass.

As we stepped out, my cousin turned to his man.

"Put her away," he said. "Then take the other pistol and come to our rooms."

As we entered the inn, I heard him order our breakfast to be served in a quarter of an hour.

Our sitting-room was directly above the archway which led to the yard, and its old bay-window commanded the street below.

My cousin strolled to the bay and stood looking out.

"When Barley comes up," he said, "I want you to tell your story over again. Six eyes are better than four in a matter like this."

I was glad of his words, for Barley was a very good man and true as steel.

The door was opened and Barley came into the room.

My cousin spoke over his shoulder.

"Mr. Spencer has had an adventure. I want you to hear it, Barley, so he's going to tell it again."

When I had done—

"Well, Barley," said my cousin, "what do you think?"

"It's a pity about that letter, sir, bearing the name and address."

"A very great pity," said Geoffrey. "Anything else?"

"If Mr. Spencer, sir, could describe the men . . . I'd like to hear what they look like. 'Dewdrop's' a nickname, for sure. I take it he's got a drop on the end of his nose."

"That's right," said I. "I marked it. He's a little dark man, very wiry. I think he's a Jew. Pharoah is tall and slight — much better class than the others and well turned out. His hair is fair, and he's rather protruding eyes. Rush looks an awful blackguard. A very low forehead, and his ears stick out from his head. Very dark he is, and a scar runs down from the edge of his mouth to his chin. The fourth man looked the best of the lot. He was very broad and had rather an open face: rough, you know, but cheerful. Not very tall, but I'd say he was very strong."

"Good," said Geoffrey. He turned to Barley. "And now come and take my place. I mean, if they should mean business. . . ."

As Barley stepped to the window, he flung himself into a chair and lighted a cigarette.

"These things happen," he said. "It wasn't your fault, my dear John, but if we don't look out, it may be your great misfortune. In plain words, as you probably know, you stand in danger of death. You viewed at your leisure certain terrible rites which no one was meant to see."

"I can't help that," said I. "I'm sorry about that letter, but I'm not going to hold my tongue. They'd murdered that poor devil and they damned well ought to be hung."

"I quite agree," said Geoffrey. "They must be brought to justice—I'm inclined to think Fate sent you with that intent. But Fate works in a curious way, and at the present moment I'm thinking much less of their lives than I'm thinking of yours. You do see the point, don't you? As long as you live and move, they go in danger of death: and they're four to—three."

"Yes, I see that," said I.

"If we were at home," said Geoffrey, "we should go straight to Scotland Yard. They'd give you armed protection and turn out the Flying Squad. But give those four reason to think that you've been to the police, and they'll strike out of hand. Your action, you see, would amount to a declaration of war."

"But how can we bring them to justice, unless we go to the police?"

"I've no idea," said my cousin. "But we've got to sit tight for the moment—extremely tight."

"Meanwhile they'll clear out of the country."

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

It does not take a young married woman very long to discover the truth of the adage that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. If said married woman acts on this principle her chances of happiness are many times as great as they would be if she just slapped any food that was handy down on the table, and burst into tears if her man refused to eat it.

Art and the Range

Cooking is an art, but it is not a difficult art.

Any girl with average intelligence can master it if she tries. But if she begins by regarding it as just something to be done and over with so she can go back to thinking about what she is going to wear the next time she goes downtown, she will end by making her husband wish he had remained a bachelor.

When a husband complains, not once, but day after day about the food that is set before him, his wife had better beware.

Some day he is going to rebel, and then the divorce court will not be far removed.

The girl who begins by learning the rudiments of plain cooking, then takes up the chemistry of food so she will not set indigestible and often harmful messes before her mate, will stand an excellent chance of happiness.

Part of the happiness will come from the contentment of her life partner. The rest of it will proceed from her own good health.

Let her beware when the head of the family suggests night after night that it would be fun to go out and eat dinner in a restaurant just for a change.

That is evidence that the home menu is getting pretty deadly.

In such a case two people who might have lived together like turtle doves are on the point of dissatisfaction with each other.

I believe in higher education for women, and in equality of the sexes. But neither of these can be maintained very long if the local cuisine is such that quantities of bicarbonate of soda must later on be consumed before those who partake of it can sleep comfortably at night.

If you are an engaged man, get your fiancee to cook a sample meal for you some time.

And if it is a bad meal, you had better break off the engagement before it is too late.

Health and happiness depend largely on eating. And they cannot be come by if you don't get the right kind of food served in the right kind of way.

Battling Bugs

Fifteen or twenty years ago the eastern and middle western part of the United States grew many thousands of straight symmetrical chestnut trees, which made still more beautiful a naturally beautiful landscape.

Today, not one of those trees is left.

Bugs, which science never found a means to combat, has destroyed them all.

Today another bug is attacking the elms—the most beautiful of all trees and unless a means is found to stop raids of the bugs, these giants of the earth may go the way of the chestnuts.

Man is endowed with the gift of mind. Bugs have no mind at all. Yet insects continue a relentless fight for their living, and are still a challenge to mankind.

The scriptural admonition "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread" was issued thousands of years ago.

It still must be heeded if man is to continue to exist on this planet.

Doubtless, it was man's greed which stripped the plains of the vast, roving herds of buffaloes, which if conserved might have given us a continuous food supply.

It is possible, too, that if man had devoted as much time to combating the crawling hungry things that now threaten his existence as he did in slaying the greater part of the game that roved over the country when he first came here, we should be free from a serious peril.

But man is by nature a destroyer.

Powder and shot, after they had taken a heavy toll of the Indians, were directed at ducks and geese, quail and prairie chicken, elk and deer.

And in the meantime these creeping things which now menace his existence were left to their own devices.

Every farmer knows the menace of locusts, grasshoppers and chinch bugs.

But not every farmer knows the importance of trees—not only for the lumber that they may yield by and by, but for their beauty as well.

I admit that many farmers appreciate their danger.

But people in cities are slow to realize it.

Not until a comparatively few years ago were they tree-minded, or bug-minded.

Delaye however, in "doing something about bugs" will be extremely perilous.

Mind can triumph over instinct but only if it is kept at work.

Once give crawling and creeping things their head, and we might as well shut up shop as a race.

You and I may escape, but those who come years after us will not.

LOOSE THAT ART IMPULSE TO CALM UPHEAVED EMOTION

Should you have a lurking suspicion that part of your child's life is dormant or incomplete, you can find out by encouraging his artistic efforts. This opinion Florence Cane expresses in an article in the Parents' Magazine. Her belief is based on the theory that art functions in the life of the child in three ways, through his physical, his mental and emotional life.

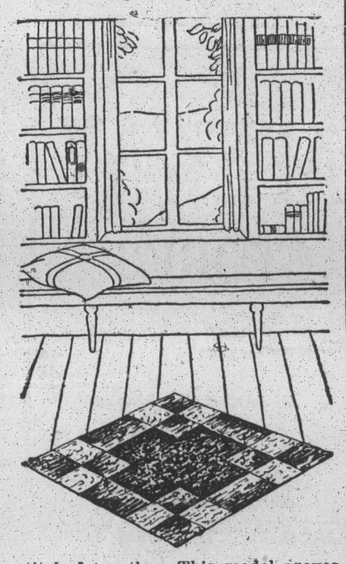

"If art were undertaken with as firm a realization of its importance to children as writing, spelling, geography and language, I believe we should soon see a different world," optimistically declares this lecturer on creative expression in New York University's School of Education. "People would be lifted above continuous commercialism, above the vibration of guns, above boredom or despair to a world of color, light and life."

However, if we are to rise above conditions that disturb or displease us, we must become as little children and satisfy our art impulse; must banish the thought that art is something to while away the hour, something to be smiled at. We will begin to take art reverently as a great reality, a necessity in man's soul by which he takes the constructive road rather than the destructive. The art impulse, whatever form it may take, very definitely is the god-given desire to create. And, in manner of speaking, in creating we pour oil upon our upheaved emotions.

"Big Ben" Not Name of London Clock, but Bell

Do you know that there's no such clock as Big Ben? That name is given simply to the bell of the clock over the Houses of Parliament. Big Ben's chime is little more than a whisper compared with what it might be, for the bell is cracked, and the huge hammer originally made for it cannot be used in case it might wreck it.

The M. P.'s who sit immediately under Big Ben do not hear it strike until its tones have already been heard in the furthermost corners of the British Isles! Wireless reception is instantaneous; but the sound of Big Ben takes a fraction of a second to reach anybody on the ground who is not "listening in."—London Answers.

City Over 3,300 Years Old Bared by Archeologists

An entire Egyptian city, built 1,390 years before the birth of Christ, for the first time in history has been laid bare in all the splendor of its careful town planning. It was built between Cairo and Luxor by the great Pharaoh Akhenaten, who here tried to rid the Egyptian religion of its abuses.

But the city, with its processional way, coronation hall, and temple of the shining spirit, lasted no more than ten years, passing with its founder. The new pharaoh moved the capital of Egypt to another site, and now John Pendleton heads a party of British excavators who are completing the discovery of this ancient city.

LIEUT. BERT A. ALLEN POST No. 2415 AND AUXILIARY

On Dec. 20, at the Woman's club the post and auxiliary were hosts to members, friends and their families at a most enjoyable Christmas tree party. Over one hundred enjoyed an interesting program of entertainment presented by chairman Wm. C. Madigan.

Mrs. Anderson's Girl Scout troop presented a skit entitled "The Grumpy Santa Claus".

Emery Bryans rendered two solos, accompanied by Robert Winters at the piano.

Katherine Madigan showed her wares in the art of tap dancing and Shirley Wickern gave two exhibitions of the art of Spanish dancing.

All numbers were well received and greatly enjoyed by the audience.

We wish to thank all our young artists for their assistance.

Santa Claus arrived soon after the entertainment and presented candy, fruit and presents to all his guests. It looked for a while as though Santa needed a few assistants but he finally caught up with his work and sent every one home happy.

The next regular meeting of the post will be Jan. 9, 1936.

A Happy and Prosperous New Year to All Our Friends.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

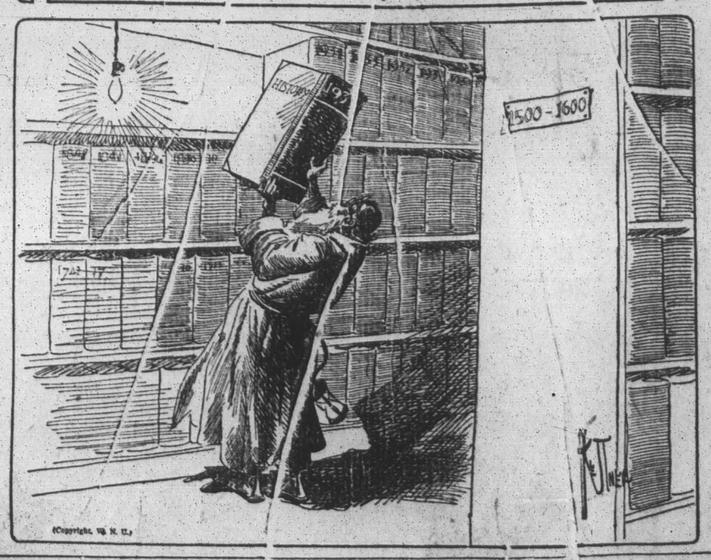

"God" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from the Psalms: "Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O Lord; . . . For thou art great, and doest wondrous things: thou art God alone."

Among the Bible citations in the Lesson-Sermon are these verses from Matthew: "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people. . . . And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease."

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "Divine Truth, Life, and Love gave Jesus authority over sin, sickness, and death. His mission was to reveal the Science of celestial being, to prove what God is and what He does for man."
